

GLO

Let them know that thou art Lord, the only God, and glorious over the whole world. Dan. iii. 22.

Impartial justice holds her equal scales,
Till stronger virtue does the weight incline;
If over thee thy glorious foe prevails,
He now defends the cause that once was thine. Prior.

Let us remember we are Cato's friends,
And act like men who claim that glorious title. Addison's Cato.

GLO'RIOUSLY. adv. [from glorious.] Nobly; splendidly; illustriously.

They inspire with those celestial flames, which shine so gloriously in their works. Dryden's Dufresnoy.

Great wits sometimes may gloriously offend,
And rise to faults true critics dare not mend. Pope.

GLO'RY. n. f. [gloria, French; gloria, Latin.] Among the old poets it was used sometimes as one syllable, gl're.

1. Praise paid in adoration. Luke ii. 14.
2. The felicity of heaven prepared for those that please God. Psal. lxxiii. 24.
3. Honour; praise; fame; renown; celebrity. Milton's Paradise Lost.
4. Splendour; magnificence. Sidney.
5. Lustre; brightness. Matthew vi. 29.
6. To glow. Matthew vi. 29.
7. Pride; boastfulness; arrogance. Waller.
8. Generous pride. Waller.

To GLO'RY. v. n. [glorior, Latin.] To boast in; to be proud of.

With like judgment glorying when he had happened to do a thing well, as when he had performed some notable mischief. Sidney, b. ii.

They were wou'd, in the pride of their own proceedings, to glory, that whereas Luther did but blow away the roof, and Zuinglius batter but the walls of popish superstition, the last and hardest work of all remained, which was to raze up the very ground and foundation of popery. Hooker, b. v. f. 42.

Let them look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men;
For then my guiltless blood must cry against them. Shakespeare, Cor. v. 6.

Thou hast seen mount Atlas,
While storms and tempests thunder on its brow,
And oceans break their billows at its feet,
It stands unmov'd, and glories in its height. Addison's Cato.

This title is what I most glory in, and what most effectually calls to my mind the happiness of that government under which I live. Addison's Freeholder, N^o. 1.

If others may glory in their birth, why may not we, whose parents were called by God to attend on him at his altar? Atter.

No one is out of the reach of misfortune; no one therefore should glory in his prosperity. Clarissa.

To GLOZE. v. a. To flatter; to colloque. Hanmer. See To GLOZE.

GLOSSA'TOR. n. f. [glossator, French, from glossa.] A writer of glosses; a commentator.

The reason why the assertion of a single judge does not prove the existence of judicial acts, is because his office is to pronounce judgment, and not to become an evidence; but why may not the same be said of two judges? Therefore, in this respect, the glossator's opinion must be false. Asyliffe.

GLO

Clad in a gown that glows with Tyrian rays. Dryden.

A malicious joy,
Whose red and fiery beams cast through your visage
A glowing pleasure. Dryden and Lee's Oedipus.

From the mingled strength of shade and light,
A new creation rises to my sight;
Such heav'nly figures from his pencil flow,
So warm with life his blended colours glow,
Amidst the soft variety I'm lost. Addison's Savage.

Like th' ethereal glow'd the green expanse.
Fair ideas flow,
Strike in the sketch, or in the picture glow. Pope.

Not the fair fruit that on yon branches glows,
With that ripe red th' autumnal sun bestows,
Can move the god. Pope.

Each pleasing Blount shall endless smiles bestow,
And fair Belinda's blush for ever glow. Pope.

Here clearer stars glow round the frozen pole.
From her naked limbs of glowing white,
In folds loose floating, fell the fainter lawn. Thomson.

To feel passion of mind, or activity of fancy.
You strive in vain
To hide your thoughts from him, who knew too well
The inward glowings of a heart in love. Addison's Cato.

Forc'd compliments and formal bows
Will shew thee just above neglect;
The fire with which thy lover glows,
Will settle into cold respect. Prior.

Did Shadrach's zeal my glowing breast inspire
To weary tortures, and rejoice in fire. Prior.

Let the gay conscience of a life well spent
Calm ev'ry thought, inspire ev'ry grace,
Glow in thy heart, and smile upon thy face. Pope.

With furies furrowed,
Despairing, confounded,
He trembles, he glows,
Amidst Rhodope's fnows. Pope.

So perish all, whose breasts ne'er learn'd to glow
For others good, or melt at others woe. Pope.

To praise is always hard,
When real virtue fires the glowing bard. Lewis.

To rage or burn as a passion.
A fire which every windy passion blows;
With pride it mounts, and with revenge it glows. Dryden.

When crept into aged veins,
Love slowly burns, and long remains;
It glows, and with a fullen heat,
Like fire in logs, it warms us long. Shadwell.

To GLOW. v. a. To make hot so as to shine. Not in use.

On each side her
Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
With divers colour'd fans, whose wind did seem
To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool. Shakespeare.

GLOW. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Shining heat.
2. Vehemence of passion.
3. Brightness or vividness of colour.
4. The pale complexion of true love.
5. The red glow of scorn and proud disdain. Shakespeare.
6. A waving glow his bloomy beds displays;
Blushing in bright diversities of day. Pope, Epistle iv.
7. GLOWWORM. n. f. [glow and worm.] A small creeping insect with a luminous tail.
8. The honey bags steal from the humble bees,
And for night-tapers crop their waxen thighs,
And light them at the fiery glowworm's eyes. Shakespeare.
9. The glowworm shews the matten to be near,
And 'gins to pale his unextinguish'd fire. Shakespeare, Hamlet.
10. A great light drowns it a smaller that it cannot be seen; as the sun that of a glowworm. Bacon's Natural History.
11. The man, who first upon the ground
A glowworm spy'd, supposing he had found
A moving diamond, a breathing stone;
For life it had, and like those jewels shone:
He held it dear, till by the springing day
Inform'd, he threw the worthless worm away. Waller.
12. To GLOZE. v. n. [glezan, Saxon.]
13. To flatter; to wheedle; to insinuate; to fawn.
14. Man will hearken to his gleazing lies,
And easily transgress. Milton's Paradise Lost, b. iii.
15. So glaz'd the tempter, and his poem tun'd:
Into the heart of Eve his words made way. Milton's Paradise Lost.
16. A false gleazing parasite would call his foolhardiness valour, and then he may go on boldly, because blindly, and by mistaking himself for a lion, come to perish like an ass. South.
17. Now for a gleazing speech.
18. To comment. This should be glaze.
19. Which Salique land the French unjustly glaze
To be the realm of France, Shakespeare's Henry V.
